

(Printed with the demonstration version of Fade In)

I LEARNED TO LIE EARLY (Monologue)

Written by
OBAFEMI ADEBISI ONIOSUN

For YINKATHEACTOR

Copyright (c) 2026

E.mail : Obafemiadebisi19@gmail.com

Contact : 09130696617

FADE IN:

1 INT. DAY - MARTIN'S ROOM

1

The room is dimly lit. MARTINS (25) slouches on a worn couch, thumbing his phone. He smirks, shakes his head and begins to talk.

MARTINS

You asked me how far? So I said we thank God. That answer covers hunger, heartbreak, and unpaid bills. But whose fault is it that honesty only attracts lectures, and not help.

He sits up, rests his hands on the table,

MARTINS (cont'd)

I lie confidently about work too. In fact, I lie about everything. "Oh! Martins, What do you do? "Oh! I'm into something creative. You feel me?"

(chuckles)

It sounds important enough to stop follow-up question.

Silence ensues. Seriousness creeps in on his face, .

MARTINS (cont'd)

The lie that scares me is not the one I tell you. It is the one I tell myself, that I still have time and I'm not behind. Also, that this is all part of the plan. Ultimately, the lie will expire and the truth will speak itself

He sighs and swallows hard, tense.

MARTINS (cont'd)

But when it does... will it still sound like me?

His gaze lingers, wearied.

FADE OUT